The Dream Act of 2001

WE'LL SET THE SCENE FOR YOU

The time is 2001 and Senator Dick Durbin and Senator Orrin Hatch introduced the Dream Act, a bipartisan legislation that would have given a permanent solution for Dreamers – children brought to the U.S. by their parents, without authorization. A time where the only option for a movie night was to pick up our movies at Blockbuster. (Do you miss it? We do.) Before Netflix and even before Redbox. The legislation didn't pass in 2001 and we are still waiting for Congress to take action. Yes. Dreamers are still waiting.

NEW TECH!

The year of the introduction to the Dream Act was also a year of many pivotal tech innovations. Dreamers too are innovators, whose contributions are essential to our communities. Over the next decade, Dreamers who currently have DACA will contribute an estimated $433.4 billion to the GDP if they can continue to work legally in the U.S. Passing the Dream Act and a permanent solution for Dreamers is not only the right thing to do, it is the economically smart thing to do.

MUSIC FOR DREAMERS:

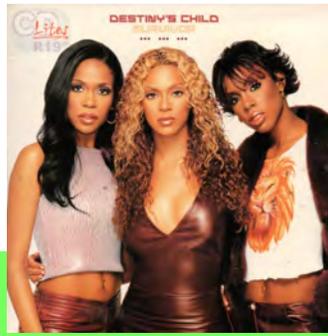

The Soundtrack to a Permanent Solution

Downloading MP3s on LimeWire and giving out mixed CDs as gifts were all the rave in 2001. Music brings communities together. Though Dreamers have deep ties in American communities and have established themselves as vital contributors to our economy, they still live without a pathway to permanent status and citizenship - and face the possibility of losing their protections due to these pending legal challenges to DACA. When Congress passes the Dream Act it not only provides certainty for Dreamers, but their families, schools, employers, and communities. schools, employers, and communities.

We know there were lots of memorable moments from 2001, but one that Dreamers, their families, and communities will never forget is the introduction of the Dream Act, a lifechanging moment for many who already considered themselves Americans and finally saw a potential pathway to citizenship. 23 years later and that group is still waiting for Congress to act. Senators Lindsey Graham and Dick Durbin introduced the Dream Act of 2023 in the Senate on February 9, 2023. The Dream Act of 2023 would allow approximately 1.9 million eligible Dreamers brought to America as children to receive permanent protections to live and work in the U.S. An overwhelming majority of Americans agree that Dreamers should be able to stay in the United States permanently. We urge Congress to act and pass the Dream Act.
